Fall 2018

Hudson Valley Economic Development Corporation (HVEDC) announced the appointment of Drake Loeb PLLC Partner Dominic Cordisco to its Board of Directors. The HVEDC is a comprehensive resource for businesses relocating to or expanding within the Hudson Valley, which includes Putnam, Orange, Ulster, Dutchess, and Sullivan counties.

"We are pleased to welcome Dominic to our Board," noted Michael Oates, President and CEO of HVEDC. "His profound understanding of environmental law, especially as applicable to matters of economic development, represents enormous opportunity for the Hudson Valley and its residents."

Cordisco is a long-time partner of Drake Loeb PLLC who concentrates his practice primarily in environmental law and commercial land development. He is a past chairman of Orange County Partnership and a board member of the Black Rock Forest Consortium and the Orange County Citizens Foundation. His private clients include many who have been focused on the economic revitalization of the Hudson Valley, including LEGOLAND New York, Angry Orchard, Resorts World, and Amy's Kitchen.

When asked about his appointment, Cordisco said, "This is a wonderful opportunity to work toward the benefit of the people and businesses in the Hudson Valley who are passionate about our heritage, our diverse and valued resources, and opportunities for economic vitality."
